The meeting last night was the last official gathering of the Medical College of Virginia faculty, as at present constituted, and for that reason was in the nature of a farewell for many of the members.

Honor Taylor and Tompkins.
It marked the close of forty years of continuous service by Dr. William H. Taylor as professor of chemistry and the end of Dr. Christopher Tompkins' long career as dean of the faculty and professor. In recognition of the services of these two men, the members of the faculty presented Drs. Taylor and Tompkins with handsome loving cups.

In a few words, Dr. Charles R. Robins presented Dr. Taylor with a cup bearing the following inscription: "To William H. Taylor, M. D., from the medical faculty of the Medical College of Virginia, May 19, 1913, in recognition of service long and faithfully rendered, of unusual attributes of mind, of sage counsel and of a fearless sense of right in performing the duties of chairman of the faculty of the Medical College of Virginia."

The cup which Dr. George Ben Johnston handed over to Dr. Tompkins had these words engraved upon it: "To Christopher Tompkins, M. D., Dean, from the medical faculty of the Medical College of Virginia, May 19, 1913, in recognition of duty faithfully performed, service long and cheerfully rendered, integrity always unquestioned as dean of the faculty of the Medical College of Virginia in guiding its affairs with equal success through stormy seas and among smooth waters."

The graduating exercises of the college will be held Tuesday night, May 27, in the City Auditorium. The baccalaureate sermon will be preached next Sunday night by the Rev. T. C. Pettit, pastor of the Second Baptist Church. On Monday morning and afternoon will come the clinics and demonstrations, and at night the adjutant faculty smoker. On Tuesday morning will be held the annual meeting of the alumni association. Following the graduating exercises, when the Rev. W. Russell Bowie, D. D., will deliver the final oration, the senior class gives its banquet in the Commonwealth Club.

MRS. LONGSTREET PLEADS OWN CASE

In Georgia asking President Wilson to grant her a hearing.

Would Sell Betrothal Ring.
With much detail, Mrs. Longstreet told of organizing an association to preserve Tallulah Falls and of spending her fortune of about $12,000 in furthering the campaign. "Since I have been in Washington," she added, "I am told that a Georgia newspaper has brought suit to sell my betrothal ring, placed on my hand by that gallant soldier of the South, on that day when all the world was young and gay, to satisfy an unpaid balance owing it for advertisement by the association."

Declaring that during the eight years she had been postmistress she had brought her office to a high grade of efficiency, and had sought to put her creed of democracy into a democracy of deeds, she said: "Maybe that is why Postmaster General Burleson says the post-office was in bad condition when Mrs. Felton, widow of W. H. Felton, for several years a member of Congress, addressed the committee in Mrs. Longstreet's behalf. She said she came to Washington without the knowledge of Mrs. Longstreet."

"We widows of Georgia do not go to war upon one another," she told the committee.

According to Mrs. Felton, the post-office had been taken away from Mrs. Longstreet because in the last election she had defended Theodore Roosevelt.

With all the great questions before the country, the attack upon this woman seems to me to be childish politics," added Mrs. Felton.

How Much Are These?
Man wants some record cards. Naturally, he drops in at a Library Bureau salesroom. Picks up a 3x5 card. Bends it. Turns it to see how good the stock is. Asks, "How much?" Salesman says, "Dollar a thousand." "H-m, that's cheap," says the man.

He picks up another 3x5 card. "How much?" Salesman says, "45.50 a thousand."

"Why such a difference?" Salesman explains. "This index card is for temporary use. This other card will last for years. Bend it! Tough, isn't it? Notice what a fine writing surface it has. We experimented for twelve years before we were able to produce a card that will stand what this card will."

The point is this: Library Bureau salesmen keep in mind, continually, the needs of the user. For temporary use, almost any quality of card will do. We have cards for temporary use. For permanent use—the best that can be made.
